Nanjemoy Baptist Church is the oldest Baptist Church in Charles County and one of the oldest continuing Baptist churches in Maryland. The church history dates from 1790 when "four men from Virginia" arrived and began preaching the ministry in the vicinity. In 1791 an acre of land was purchased and in 1793 a membership was established and the first meeting house built. In 1837 the church was formally recognized and became the first member of the newly organized Maryland Baptist Union Association (now the Baptist Convention of Maryland). One of its longest serving pastors was the Reverend William I. Chiles (1835 to 1859 and 1866 to 1874) who lived at nearby Mt. Pleasant (CHAS-208).

The basic fabric of the existing church dates from 1905 when an earlier building was completely renovated. In subsequent years various alterations were made including, in about 1925, the installation of stained glass windows and the construction of a 75 foot tall bell tower on the east front. Of an architecture that can best be described as a local interpretation of a Victorian-Gothic design, the tower has buttress-like sheds at the first floor, small lancet arched windows at the second floor, and a tiered upper section "embellished" by narrow wood pinnacles and a tall metal spire. Additions to house the Sunday school were added to the east side and west end in 1938. In 1944, the interior and exterior were completely renovated, and the interior again between 1950 and 1953.

The Nanjemoy Baptist Church is a simple frame structure typical of many other local examples of rural ecclesiastical architecture dating from the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The framework of the original structure is believed to date from the 19th century, but the building was extensively renovated in 1905, successfully covering over all of the earlier fabric.

One-story with a high gable roof, the building faces east from its location close to the west side of Baptist Church Road. The south side elevation is four bays in width. A door occupies the third bay from the east end. The north side has two windows but the remaining openings are covered by a later, three bay frame wing extending out from this side at a right angle to the main body of the church. On both sides of the tin sheathed roof are single interior stove chimneys. A shed roofed extension of the west end of the church is three bays wide on that elevation and has a single window in its south end.

The most interesting feature of the church is its 75 foot tall bell tower, added to the east front of the building circa 1925. Of simple and very basic Victorian-Gothic styling, it has windowless, buttress-like, one-story sheds flanking each side, small lancet arched windows at the second floor level, and a tiered third story where the bell is housed. The upper section has louvered "windows" framing the bell housing and each of the two levels displays tall, slender wood pinnacles. At the top is a tin shingles spire. The main entrance to the church is located at the base of the tower and is decorated by a shallow board pediment over a stained glass transome. The interior of the church was completely remodeled in the middle of this century.

Fronting the entrance of the church is a decorated steel and iron archway emblazoned with the words "Nanjemoy Baptist Church". A cemetery to the north and west sides of the church contains several nineteenth century grave stones.
